The first issue of New Voices in Psychology of 2012 yet again contains a range of diverse and interesting contributions, including a selection of articles first presented at the Second Southern African Students’ Psychology Conference held in June 2011. The guest editor of this selection of articles was Sydney Butler, ably assisted by Yaseen Alley and Angelo Fynn. Thank you to them and to everybody else who made the conference possible.

We welcome the following members on the editorial team:

- Werner de Klerk (School of Psychosocial Behavioural Sciences, North West University)
- Erica de Lange (Africa Unit for Transdisciplinary Health Research, North West University)
- Shose Kessi (Department of Psychology, University of Cape Town)
- Mzikazi Nduna (Department of Psychology, University of the Witwatersrand)
- Caretha Laubscher, Khonzi Mbatha and Melusi Mbatha (Department of Psychology, Unisa)

We also welcome the following academics as members on the New Voices editorial advisory board:

- Norman Duncan (Dean of the Faculty of Humanities, University of Pretoria)
- Kevin Durrheim (School of Psychology, University of KwaZulu-Natal)
- Hlengiwe Mkhize (South Africa’s Deputy Minister of Higher Education and Training)
- Vera Roos (School of Psychosocial Behavioural Sciences, North West University)

The editorial team of New Voices continues to have regular ‘coffee storms’. In May 2012, the team invited the people who work with us in the production of the journal, our official publishers, Unisa Press, to join us around a pot of soup. We discussed various possibilities for the further development of the journal’s website, online publication of the journal, the distribution and funding of printed copies of the journal, and how to increase the journal’s ‘impact factor’.
As mentioned in the previous issue, we invite submissions for a special issue of the journal on sexuality research. This special issue is intended to highlight positive sexual health contributions from authors from South Africa, Africa and around the world. We invite contributions on all aspects of sexuality related research as well as contributions in the form of theoretical manuscripts, book reviews, DVD and film reviews, photo essays, interviews, and reflections. For any enquiries about the special issue and for submission of contributions, please contact Khonzi Mbatha at mbathk@unisa.ac.za or Caretha Laubscher at laubsc@unisa.ac.za.

Until next time!
